Learning Goals

Hi! This lesson will introduce you to a variety of forms that constitute “fake news.”

We've all heard this term in popular culture, but do you really know what it means? “Fake news” is a term that gets thrown around loosely, but it's actually a very real thing – and a very real problem when we inadvertently spread false or misleading messages on social media or through email. Sometimes we'll just annoy our followers. But sharing these types of media messages also misleads others and reflect on your own trustworthiness and credibility.

By the end of this lesson you will:

Understand what fake news is and gain awareness of the types of false/misleading news

Be able to identify forms of fake news in all forms of media

Be able to recognize biases in media messages

Be able to creatively demonstrate what you have learned using technology tools

Please share your learning goal(s) here. What do you hope to gain a better understanding of? What questions do you have before starting the lesson?
